NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC KIDS inspires young adventurers to explore the world through award-winning magazines, books, website, apps, games, toys, television series and events and is the only kids brand with a world-class scientific organization at its core.

My biggest kiddos (elementary school aged) love to sit with these books for hours and hours. They have become a wealth of (probably) useless information! Big text, interesting pictures and kid friendly language that isn't "so kid friendly it's insulting". Great for road trips or vacations. A lot of quiet entertainment I. A very small amount of space.

My son is a big fan of Weird but true. He is in 1st grade and he finished the 3 books in a weekend. Now from time to time, he mentions things he remembers from these books. He is very proud of himself in knowing things that no one else knows in the family.

We got these for our kids for Christmas. They are ages 11, 8, and 4, and they all love them. Sometimes we'll bring them in the car and take turns reading the "weird but true" facts. A big hit with the kids and really quite fun and fascinating for my husband and me as well.

I expected that it is writing. However, it is just a collection of sentences. AnÃfÂçÃ â ÑÃ â yway, it is fun.

My 8 year old is obsessed with these and read 2 in a day out loud because she was so excited about each fact. She would've read the third but we told her we needed a break! :) They really are interesting and it kept her reading and learning while having fun.

Got this for my 7-year-old nephew for Christmas and he loves them! He asked for these book specifically but the boxed set is a nice touch and lets him travel with several books in the car.

My kids love these books! The set lives in our guest room along with other books to help entertain visitors and every time people stay with us they comment on how much they enjoyed looking through the books. A few have even bought a set for other family members.
