"The little black book of gay travel." -- New York Times

Gina Gatta has been the Editor-in-Chief of the Damron Company's LGBT travel guide series since the early '90s. In 1992, she became Damron's President. Since then, she has not only expanded the company's number of best-selling titles but also launched a successful online database. She has published she has published over 70 books. Born and raised in Rhode Island, she has resided in San Francisco for 26 years.

Book says "international" but no information on Portugal. Powell's were very nice about letting me return it.

Good reference guide...Thanks !

As always, right on the mark and current and up to date. Very glad I just got the current update for my vacation to Palm Springs as the list is very accurate with all the listings for the area, saving a lot of time searching for it. Very good buy.

It's such a small book with little print. Spartacus is much more inclusive with added details about many places.

The item was never received, has promised a refund, but that was never received either. I no longer shop for this reason.

I've seen other guides come and go (remember when Fodor's had one?), but Damron is the standard. They've managed to do it right for decades, and it shows. This book has saved my ass on numerous occasions. (and to those who complain about a few out-of-date listings... it's a book. They can't update it after its printed! [...])

Damron is still the gold standard for understanding gay travel and gay nightlife and gay-friendly businesses of interest. The 2009 edition is no different. The key codes on the front back cover are an improvement, but a list of the codes in small type at the bottom of each double-page spread would be a positive tweak.
