Linda has pursued her interest in first and second language pronunciation for over forty years. She has taught ESL students at Georgia Tech, international teaching assistants at Emory University, and graduate students in applied linguistics at Georgia State University in Atlanta. Her special interests are applying pronunciation research to practice and integrating pronunciation into the oral communication curriculum. She is the author of two pronunciation texts, Well Said and Well Said Intro (National Geographic Cengage) and the editor of the teacher resource volume Pronunciation Myths (University of Michigan Press).

I received this book and it was used by another person. Ok, I can understand that it is a used item. But considering that it is a book, if you are going to sell it at least try to do it in good conditions. Now it does not make any sense to try to do the exercises knowing the answers (because even if I erase the marks, some signs of the answers still remain). I want to return this item and have a refund.

I am a master's student in Applied Linguistics and Teaching ESL. I had to buy this textbook for a course, but I plan to keep it because it has so many activities for teaching both segmentals and suprasegmentals. I have also used it in tutoring students. I would prefer for some of the communicative practice activities to be more engaging, though.

Very good. It helped me a lot.

More than awesome.Thanks

This is an excellent tool for non-English speakers to help improve word pronunciation. I ordered the workbook that goes with it which is very helpful as well.

Good book!
